I understand that the draft ndf has decided that Mid Wales must swap its peace and beauty for industrialisation. I am not happy to accept a change like that in my landscape, especially with no consultation. How can the Welsh Government simply override the wishes of local authorities? Unethical.

This is a scenic area, dependent for its economy on tourism to a great extent, there are long distance footpaths bringing walkers, caravan sites for folk looking for quiet after a week in a city, and lots of attractions. Who would want to visit a countryside strewn with pylons? And the uplands are a haven for wildlife, such as the endangered curlew and lapwing.

The lanes around here are beautiful in spring and summer, but certainly not suitable for transporting bits of pylon. It will be chaos

In the words of Joni Mitchell “You don’t know what you’ve got till it’s gone”

And..... you can’t eat money!

Yours in concern, Carrie Higson
