Can I draw your attention to the attached two pictures

The first is a map of Anglesey. The black and green areas are the only places over 500 m from a residence. Not many!

The second shows the detail of the planning guidelines adopted in Ireland. A minimum buffer zone of 500 m, and for the 250 m turbines proposed a buffer zone of 1 km

I don't think there is anywhere on Anglesey where this size of turbine could be sited ... if you followed the same guidelines as Ireland

I can only assume that you either intend dispensing with buffer zones altogether, or you've got it wrong in proposing Anglesey as a Priority Area. In either case, I really cannot accept the proposal
