Hi I travelled along the M5 last week and we noticed some of the Turbines had got stains on them from oil leaks that must contaminate the surrounding land and the Sea with Off Shore turbines so until these faults are corrected so they can't happen i suggest you stop erecting anymore, and they are unreliable no wind no electric too cold no electric, Blades go to land fill when scrapped, and new Concrete bases when replaced.

Why put the wind turbines on the hills where they do more damage than good, They dig up Pest and replace with Concrete that contaminates the ground for Thousands of years, plus it can cause flash flooding because of the roads they make to transport them and everything else up, They are trying to stop the damage done by vehicles have done on hill tops, Now i think it would make more sense to put these turbines along the sides of Motorways and Railway tracks where the power is wanted, They could have charging points in regular distances along motorways where cars could charge instead of having to get to a service station, it would be much easier to do everything!
