Hi

I've read your Draft National Development Framework proposals and have to say that I and many others totally object.

Whilst we MUST move to renewable energy asap, we do not need to do it at the expense of our landscape.

The developments in the north sea in terms of the size and the mooring mechanisms of wind turbines are astounding, and proving that we do not need to blight the land with acres of turbines and miles of pylons.

The plan must be changed - we have millions of acres of sea to play with, put the turbines out the way where you can build at greater scale and not damage the natural landscape.

Please let me know that you have received and logged this message against further onshore wind farm development

Thanks

Alex
