The co2 produced in making windmills , the concrete for the base , the engineers and machinery transport etc , does not make this a viable project

No

Comments:

I think this is terrible for the local communities, homes will de value , tourists will not visit in there numbers . Wild life will suffer . Look at Scotland . Evidence is there on tourism decline because of wind farms . And our beautiful countryside will be permanently damaged . I would rather see nuclear energy . It works what ever the weather

Part C

I believe there is no thought for the local community, it's people it's wealth it's life style . Wind farms should be off shore . I do not have the same view on solar panels . These are greener in there manufacturing , not as dreadful in there looks , and more stable in there electrify production . Not hundreds of feet high
