VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN DOMESTIC ABUSE AND SEXUAL VIOLENCE (WALES) ACT 2015 - EDUCATION PROGRAMME

Information for Secondary Schools delivering educational resources

This information and guidance is provided to accompany the Welsh Women's Aid and AVA review of existing healthy relationships and gender-based violence, domestic abuse and sexual violence related teaching resources, commissioned by Welsh Government.

It should be used in conjunction with the Good Practice Guide - Whole Education Approach to Violence against Women, Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence in Wales.

Introduction

There are many opportunities within the secondary school curriculum to develop young people's understanding and skills to prevent violence against women, domestic abuse and sexual violence. Many schools are already doing interesting and innovative work.

The following are the key themes to integrate into current work:

- Changing gender norms, roles and expectations.
- Building respectful relationships.
- Identifying and understanding violence against women, domestic abuse and sexual violence.
- Challenging and stopping violence against women, domestic abuse and sexual violence.
- Help-seeking and support.

Top tips for working in secondary schools:

- Make a strategic decision to integrate work on violence against women, domestic abuse and sexual violence and gender equality into the curriculum, ensuring governor and head teacher support.
- Integrate this commitment into relevant school policies, for example the School Improvement Plan or link into strategic equality plans and associated equality objectives for the school.
- Create a working group or support a member of school staff to co-ordinate department leads' development and implementation of the work.

- Organise staff and governor seminars to raise awareness, assess aims and implementation, and develop a clear action plan.
- Plan a school INSET session on equality, with a training session for each department on how to integrate violence against women, domestic abuse and sexual violence and gender equality issues into the work that they are already doing.
- Work with curriculum leads to create a map across the curriculum that shows where gender equality and violence against women and girls, domestic abuse and sexual violence are discussed.
- Implement the work with 'whole school' structures, activities – assemblies, use of World Days (e.g. International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women, 25 November, International Women's Day, 8th March) – and tutorial programmes.
- Ensure that school staff members are aware and informed of procedures for school incidents or disclosures, and that clear and active links are established with relevant external agencies, for pastoral and curriculum inputs and support.
- Seek help and guidance from local professionals within the Local Authority or voluntary sector, including within safeguarding and child protection, domestic abuse and sexual violence and youth services. Link into local partnerships and national ones, where they exist.
- Work in partnership with other schools, in clusters or federations to develop the work.
