Dear Cadw,

I am a concerned resident of 50 years of the Rumney ward and I am writing to you regarding the recent application for status of the Rompney Castle Pub Rumney Cardiff, sent to you by the Information Redacted. Copy of Enclosed Mail.

As you are aware there has been a planning application to the Cardiff Planning Dep't; to demolish this property, and i have many concerns that if this is allowed there could be archaeological finds if it is destroyed, therefore the build would be lost.

According to your survey I have been informed that you only checked the outside of the property, I would like to state that over years property owners have altered and covered vast sections inside and surrounding areas. Regarding the inside, in the 1970/90s I was inside the pub and recall there was a VERY ornate stone built opened chimney walk-in fire place which i believe has been covered up , also the cellar area had a link to I believe was a Roman Road which led to the Bristol channel, which was supposedly used by smuggling for pirates.

I would also like to point your visit reply, had not considered the chimneys, Enclosed Pictures show that some of the original chimneys of the 17/1880s are still part of the build today.

Could you please reconsider and visit the site again to carry out a more in-depth survey of both inside and outside.

Yours Sincerely
