Subject: RE: Scheduling backlog

Information redacted ,

I have not done the figures properly but I can give you a flavour of the order of magnitude....

I have 20+ scheduling requests / revisions that have come up through casework over the last few years since I have been at Cadw. This includes sites in the NE like Information redacted and the revisions at Information redacted, as well as those in the NW such as Information redacted and revisions at Information redacted. There are also the outstanding slate schedulings. The backlog from before I started comprises recommendations from c.50 GAT reports written over the last 20 or so years. Some of these reports make only a single recommendation - often very large or complex such as the Information redacted, Information redacted or the Marconi Radio Transmitter at Waunfawr. However, some of these make numerous recommendations e.g. 6 recommendations from the mills project and 12 from the aircraft crash sites project...

In total, I would estimate we are looking at 100+ schedulings but a worst case scenario could easily be twice that number.

Obviously, this is just an estimate from the North. Information redacted will undoubtedly be able to provide further data...

Happy to discuss further / look into this in more detail if needed.

Thanks,

Information redacted
