What is a Single Unified Safeguarding Review?

A Single Unified Safeguarding Review (SUSR) is carried out when someone has experienced significant harm or has died, and where it is thought lessons can be learned.

Agencies will come together to discuss what happened and whether anything could have been done differently. You will be asked for your views on what happened. Your involvement is very important.

This provides an opportunity for agencies to consider what can be learned and what improvements can be made to practice and services in the future.

How do we do the Review?

A Review Panel made up of senior staff members from the agencies that worked with the person who harmed your family member is held to manage the review process.

The Panel may include staff from organisations such as the NHS, local authority, police service, education, probation or youth offending services, and any other agency who may have worked with the person.

An independent Chair will be appointed to lead and oversee the Panel.

An independent Reviewer(s) will be appointed to review the practice and services that were provided to the person and produce a Report with recommendations.

A separate Learning Event will be held and attended by staff who were directly involved with providing a service to the person who harmed your family member. It will allow them to reflect together on what happened and help identify learning for future practice.

How do I contribute to the Review?

Your views are central to the SUSR process and are very important to us. Any comments or concerns you want to share about what happened to your family member can be very helpful in producing the review.

If you are willing, the Chair or Reviewer(s) will contact you to determine how you would like to be involved in the Review. Additional support such as advocacy is available.

The Reviewer(s) will also want to speak to you about your family member to understand what they were like as a person.

The Reviewer(s) will share your contributions with staff who attend the Learning Event and include it in the Report if you wish.

What happens next?

Multi-Agency Timeline

The Review Panel will produce a timeline of the contact agencies had with the person who harmed your family member. They will use this to understand what agencies knew about them and how they worked alone and together. The timeline will also be considered at the learning event.

Engaging with Others

Other people may also be approached to engage in the Review.

In order to gain a full understanding of the circumstances around what happened, the person who harmed your family member may be approached by the Reviewer(s).

Meeting the Panel

You will be given the option to meet with the Review Panel. This is your decision and you do not have to decide straight away. You can also change your mind during the Review process.

The Report

After the Learning Event the Reviewer(s) will write the SUSR Report using the information obtained from their engagement with all individuals spoken to through the process, the Panel and during the Learning Event.

The Report will provide recommendations on what needs to happen in the future.

Your contributions about your family member will be included in the Report if you wish.

You will be given the opportunity to view the draft Report to check it is accurate and to ensure your words have been captured appropriately.

The Report will not mention you or your family member by name and you will be able to choose a pseudonym to be used for your family member.

The Report will be published and an Action Plan will be shared with the right people so that the actions can be addressed.

Your Feedback

At the end of the Review, you will also be provided with an opportunity to tell us your views on the Review process. For example:

- Is there anything you wish you had been asked about but weren't?
- Did you feel like you could talk openly to the people who were liaising with you?
- Is there anything that you think could have been done differently?
- Is there anything you think should have been done, but perhaps wasn't?

Your feedback is important to us and will inform how reviews are undertaken in the future.
