1. Use of Security Seals

Does the Welsh Government, or any of its departments, agencies, or public bodies, use tamper-evident security seals — for example, pull-tight seals, anchor seals with wire, twister seals with wire, or security sticker seals — for securing official documents, storage containers, equipment, or other sensitive materials?

Yes

2. Procurement Method

Are such security seals procured directly by the Welsh Government or through national or regional procurement frameworks (for example, via the Crown Commercial Service, Sell2Wales, or other collaborative agreements)?

Security seals are purchased through the Welsh Government's national collaborative framework agreement for office supplies.

3. Technical Specifications

Does the Welsh Government apply any technical specifications or standards when procuring security seals? If full documentation cannot be shared for operational or security reasons, please confirm whether such specifications exist and provide a general description (e.g., tamper-evident, single-use, security classification).

The last purchase on record was for Versapak T2 Seal White

4. Usage and Most Recent Purchase

Please indicate the approximate frequency of use of these security seals and the date of the most recent purchase, if this information is recorded.

Information that we hold indicates the most recent purchase was undertaken late last year.

5. Responsible Unit

Please confirm which department, directorate, or function within the Welsh Government is responsible for the procurement of these security seals.

See response under question 2.
