About us Sustainable development Well-being statement

Meeting the needs of future generations

Transport connects people and communities, helps businesses thrive, supports jobs and creates prosperity. It's a powerful and dynamic tool for community cohesion, social justice and inclusive economic growth.

Llwybr Newydd - the Wales Transport Strategy will shape transport in Wales over the next 20 years. It prioritises people's travel needs and the fight against climate change.

Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015

Introduction

This Well-being Statement reflects our commitment to the principles and goals set out in the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015. This legislation provides a framework for sustainable development and long-term thinking in public service delivery. It aims to ensure that the needs of present generations are met without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Our well-being objectives are designed to maximise our contribution to these goals. These objectives also adhere to the five ways of working prescribed by the Act: long-term thinking, prevention, integration, collaboration and involvement.

As a transport and travel organisation, we recognise our unique position to influence connectivity, economic development, health and well-being, environmental sustainability and social equity across Wales. Our objectives reflect our commitment to creating an accessible, sustainable and efficient multi-modal transport network that better serves communities in Wales.

Thousands of Welsh workers to benefit from rise in real Living Wage

More than 21,000 workers in Wales are set for a pay rise under the voluntary real Living Wage.

The real Living Wage differs from the lower UK Government's statutory minimum wage rate - the National Living Wage - for those over the age of 21.

Anglesey has celebrated the important and significant strides made in becoming a trauma-informed island.

Since 2023, the county council has adopted an organisational approach to promote connections and relationships to support those struggling with adversity or trauma in their lives. This has included helping to effectively support the underlying needs of children and the community with empathy and compassion.

Vital financial support from the UK government's Shared Prosperity Fund (SPF) has been essential in training staff and members of the wider community.

Training has also been provided to the island's schools, children and family Services, education and community partners ensuring that the widespread impact of trauma is recognised and included in practices and policies to promote safety, empowerment, and healing.

Last week saw a special event, with key partners and stakeholders, held at the Menai Science Parc, Gaerwen, to celebrate the island's trauma-informed journey to date.

THE Vale Council is set to become the first local authority in Wales to restrict the advertising of unhealthy foods in its spaces.

Foods categorised as High in Fat, Sugar and Salt (HFSS) will no longer be promoted at bus stops or on boards along the Vale's highway system if recommendations are approved by the council's cabinet when members meet next month.

This move would also prevent such products from being marketed on the Council's website.

The FAW has a responsibility at a global and local level today and tomorrow, and we are committed to delivering our mission effectively and sustainably.

The bedrock of our sustainability strategy is the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act. Its sustainable development principle commits us to take action to improve the economic, social, environmental and cultural well-being of Cymru.

This means acting in a manner which ensures that the needs of the present are met without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Locally, we will also align with the Welsh Government's vision for sport in our nation, as well as their international strategy for a globally responsible Cymru.

But this is a journey and there is still a lot to do to remove the barriers preventing the legislation from reaching its full potential

These include:

- Lack of long-term funding and resources, which fuels short-term thinking
- Lack of integrated thinking; competing priorities
- Complex partnership landscape
- Inconsistent language
- Need to involve private sector
- Need to do more and better involvement
- Need to have the right measures for success and use them well

The Act's Impact on Health

- Driving a Preventative, Long-Term Health Approach
- Strengthening Action on Health Inequalities
- Embedding the Five Ways of Working in Health Planning
- Impact on Wider System Determinants of Health
- Ongoing Challenges
