Hi Information Redacted,

Yes I think it does provide a way forward and an assurance that we can continue to use the site.

Thanks for forwarding on to the relevant person. I'm going to check what paperwork we need to tie all of this together so I may be in touch if this needs 'signing off'. I'm hopeful the email below will suffice though.

Thanks again,

Good Morning Information Redacted,

Following Welsh Government confirmation that they are satisfied with the information provided, does this now provide a way forward for DVSA?
Thanks

Bore Da Information Redacted,

Are you able to meet at Jct 33a this coming Friday 20th, or are the RA's sent by Information Redacted suitable for your decision.

I am of the opinion that DVSA being stationary at Jct 33a is appropriate, to target unsafe & unlawful use of commercial vehicle and our Roads. There are a number of points, but briefly I believe the risk associated with being stationary to the offside of the slip road (over a series of broken white lines) is acceptable given the slow 'on speed' of vehicles at this location, early view/visibility, Battenberg livery of DVSA stopper vehicles etc. I will also add that the position of which is infrequent, and is not lengthy in duration.

The risks associated to the DVSA stopper staff are covered by Information Redacted.

I am more than happy to meet on site.

Good Afternoon Information Redacted,

Thank you for the information provided below, to assist Welsh Government as highway authority for the A55 – are you able to provide your current risk assessment / method statement for the use of the J33a Brookside junction eastbound onslip hatched area?

Many thanks

Hi Information Redacted,

Thanks for responding to Information Redacted on this and thanks also for forwarding to Information Redacted.

We have been using this current location since we were granted Powers To Stop in 2003. We have had no incidents and, until recently, had not received any complaints about us parking there. Last year, we were contacted by a member of the public who complained about us parking there, questioning our authority. I responded through our corporate office, but they have come back to us questioning our authority further.

Each site we use will have had approval from the police and the highways authority responsible for the site. Unfortunately, the management team at Llay has changed a couple of times in the last few years and the necessary approval paperwork cannot be found. It is this approval which I am trying to find to ascertain that we do have the authority to park where we do. I guess this is the reason why we'd like to meet up.

When I have addressed the complainants concerns previously, I have quoted certain parts of the Highway Code to illustrate that the chevrons are within a broken white line and not a continuous white line. The broken white line I believe allows us to park on the chevron. To quantify this, I asked our policy team the question and this is what they have concluded (sorry for the length of this) In terms of the rules, the relevant provision in the Highway Code is Rule 130, which deals with areas of white diagonal stripes (chevrons). Where chevrons are bordered by a broken white line, the Code says drivers should not enter the area unless it is necessary and they can see that it is safe to do so. The absolute prohibition (“MUST NOT enter except in an emergency”) only applies where the chevrons are bordered by a solid white line.

This position is reinforced in Know Your Traffic Signs, which explains that hatched markings bounded by a broken line identify parts of the carriageway not normally used by traffic, but may be entered when necessary and safe. Only chevron areas bounded by a continuous line are subject to a strict prohibition on entry other than in an emergency.

Given the physical layout here – a slip road entry, broken boundary line, no live traffic lane on the right and no separation of traffic flows – I do not see anything in either the Highway Code or Know Your Traffic Signs that makes brief, operational use of this area automatically impermissible. In policy terms, it is capable of falling within the “necessary and safe” discretion described in both sources, provided the use is temporary and clearly linked to an operational requirement.

I would still distinguish this from situations where chevrons are actively protecting turning movements or separating traffic streams, where using them as a waiting position would be much harder to justify. That does not appear to be the case at this location.

Separately from the Highway Code position, the usual DVSA governance considerations still apply. It remains important that:

- the location has been assessed as suitable,
- a current risk assessment is in place, and
- the relevant authorities (police / highways, as appropriate in Wales) are content with its use.

Given the long-standing use of the site and the fact it is also used by North Wales Police, that seems reasonable in practice, but I think it would be sensible to ensure the approval position is clearly documented and retained, particularly given the recent public challenge.

Overall, based on the markings and layout shown in the photos, I don’t see a conflict with either the Highway Code or Know Your Traffic Signs in the short-term, operational use you describe, provided the necessity and safety tests are met.

Hope this gives you and Information Redacted sufficient background to the issue and I look forward to meeting up on 20th.

Regards,

Information Redacted

Good afternoon Information Redacted ,

Your details were passed to me by Information Redacted

(NMWTRA) who suggested this was your area, and I hope you can assist further.

I have spoken to Information Redacted

(NMWTRA) before Christmas about this particular issue, and although Information Redacted did assist, I was not able to fully bottom out the issue. I have been in discussion with Information Redacted (DVSA) who is dealing with a complaint from a resident in the Northrop Hall area, and is regarding DVSA Traffic Officers positioning themselves on A55 Jct33a (e/b) in order to target Commercial Vehicles and escort them to Ewloe weighbridge.

I am aware of The Motorways Traffic Regs, but I'm not able to specifically find references to Dual Carriageways and I have not had sighting of any TRO's for the A55 on/off slips which would provide further direction. Moreover, our roads crime team officers also use the same location - So I have an interested in working towards an agreement and the 'legality' of positioning enforcement vehicles at the on Slip Jct 33a.

Could we possibly arrange a meeting for Friday 20th March to work towards an agreement/strategy regarding using that location?

I have CC'd Information Redacted (DVSA Enforcement Manager) who initially contacted me regarding this issue, and who may wish to provide further information?

CC'd Information Redacted

Diolch
