- (a) Where employers feel that the skills of their employees are not high enough to meet their current business objectives.

In 95% of cases, the true value of an estimated result of around 50% based on 200 responses will lie in the approximate range 43% to 57%. For results less or more than 50% or results based on an increased number of responses (as is the case for some of the larger local authorities), the absolute variation about true value will be narrower. Whatever the result, this sampling variation will explain at least some of any differences between individual local authorities and should be considered in any analysis of these data.
